Brain Bender: Stumped by Snow Cones

Kristi, Pablo, Jasmine and Rob ordered snow cones at the summer festival. Each friend chose a different flavor—cherry, orange, grape or blue raspberry—and a different number of scoops—two, three, four or five. Use the clues below to find out what kind of snow cone each person had.

- Kristi either had the snow cone with five orange scoops or the one with three grape scoops.
- Pablo was not the person who ordered four blue raspberry scoops.
- Jasmine's snow cone had one more scoop than Rob's (which was not the smallest snow cone).
- The grape snow cone was eaten by a boy.

(Answer: Kristi's snow cone had five orange scoops; Pablo's snow cone had two cherry scoops; Jasmine's snow cone had four blue raspberry scoops; Rob's snow cone had three grape scoops.)

Independence Day

On July 2, 1776, the Second Continental Congress, assembled in Philadelphia, voted to approve a motion from Richard Henry Lee of Virginia calling for separation from Great Britain. The words of the resolution were added to the Declaration of Independence, and on July 4, the declaration was formally adopted. On July 8, 1776, the first public reading of the declaration was held in Philadelphia's Independence Square. Band music and the ringing of bells accompanied the event.
